Seeking Talented & Motivated Speech-Language Pathologists

Join a growing multidisciplinary clinical and research team at Geisinger's Autism & Developmental Medicine Institute (ADMI) at sites in beautiful central Pennsylvania. In collaboration with nearby universities, ADMI's vision is to expand and integrate clinical services, research, education, and family support for children and adolescents with autism and other neurodevelopmental disorders.

At ADMI, speech-language pathologists:

- perform speech/language evaluations and augmentative & alternative communication assessments as part of a dynamic, multidisciplinary developmental medicine, psychology, neuroscience, and genomics team
- work within a busy, stimulating clinical and research environment serving individuals with diverse neurodevelopmental challenges and complex communication needs
- develop clinical expertise and research interests through specialty clinics for fragile X, Smith-Magenis, 22q11.2 deletion, and other genetic syndromes
- collaborate with children's school and behavioral teams to develop and implement treatment recommendations and therapy plans
- are respected and supported colleagues within Geisinger's nationally-recognized and growing Autism & Developmental Medicine Institute
